About the Book

The much anticipated third edition of Dinky Toys will delight collectors everywhere. Revised and updated with current prices, Dinky Toys highlights the excitement around this classic toy, manufactured between 1933 and 1980. The revised price guide has a convenient reference to the vehicles that are illustrated in the book.

This book offers a concise history, a detailed listing of major variations, and a chronological list. It includes all the Dinky Toys that ever were made in Britain, France, Spain and other parts of the world, from the earliest model railroad accessories to the first Matchbox cars to bear the name Dinky Toys. With 128 color photographs and both the new and old system of catalog numbers this book is a must for all collectors.

About the Author

Dr. Edward Force is recognized as a leading authority on miniature toy vehicles in America. He has written several other books on miniature toys including Miniature Emergency Vehicles, Corgi Toys, Classic Miniature Vehicles Made in Germany, Classic Miniature Vehicles Made in France, and Classic Miniature Vehicles Made in Italy. When he is not collecting toys or writing books, he teaches German at Central Connecticut State University.

Length 4 1/2"

Dear Dinky Toy Enthusiast:

April, 1999

Thank you for your interest in becoming a member of the international DINKY TOY CLUB of AMERICA (formerly the Highland Dinky Toy Club). Let us tell you about the Club:

WHO WE ARE: The Dinky Toy Club of America was founded by two individuals in the Spring of 1994 to further the collecting interest of Dinky Toys. We sought to continue and grow the interest of collecting Dinky Toys for the enjoyment of remembering what it was like collecting Dinkys as kids. To date, we have over 400 members throughout the United States, Canada, France, England, the Netherlands, New Zealand and Australia. This network of collectors has become the hub for some fascinating dialogue and trades of Dinkys among the members.

WHAT THE CLUB DOES: The Dinky Toy Club of America publishes and mails out to its members a Club Newsletter four (4) times a year - March, June, September, and December. The Newsletter contains sections such as "Dr. Dinky" - dealing with questions club members may have on history, identification numbers, paint, engineering specs, etc. relating to the toys; articles written by "Mr. Dinky" on historical perspectives of the Meccano era as well as other timely news; a "Wanted/4 Sale" section for members to seek, swap or sell pieces to other members; inclusion of periodic color, frame ready photos of selected Dinky pieces; a Technical Section that deals with tips on restoration, paints, parts, etc.; and news of annual meetings for members to get together to chat and see other members collections. This year we are in our 5th Annual Meet. We also sponsor a World Wide Web site for access to the internet for Dinky Collectors.

WHAT DOES IT COST? If you are interested in becoming a member of the Club, please write to the DTCA for membership dues or complete the attached Membership Application found on the following page and mail to: The DINKY TOY CLUB of AMERICA, P.O. Box 11, Highland, Maryland, 20777. We hope to see you as a member and look forward to chatting with you in the near future.

Sincerely,

Jerry

I want to thank Jerry Fralick founder of the DINKY TOY CLUB of AMERICA (DTCA), for lending his assistance and knowledge of today's collectible market in revising the fourth edition of this price guide based on prices obtained from toy shows, auctions and internet sales. Again, many thanks go out to Peter Schiffer for encouraging me to revise this guide and for publishing it. To all the collectors who make this guide very special.

The terms “Dinky Toys”, “Dinky Supertoys”, “Modeled Miniatures”, “Dublo Dinky Toys”, “Speedwheels” and other terms used to refer to various special features of Dinky Toys have been the property of those firms that have owned the name of Dinky Toys. Introduction

The purpose of this book is to offer the hobbyist a concise but thorough source of information on Dinky Toys products. The history of Dinky Toys has been told thoroughly in other books, especially in terms of the manufacturers and their corporate history; we shall confine ourselves here to those historical details which bear more or less directly on the models themselves.

The first Dinky Toys cars came on the market in December of 1933, but they were not called Dinky Toys until April of 1934. Until then they were Modelled Miniatures, sold under the name of their original manufacturers, the Frank Hornby firm best known for its electric trains. The Modelled Miniatures were, in fact, intended for use as accessories on model railroad platforms, and included figures of people and domestic animals, mailboxes, railroad signals, and even some non-motorized railroad rolling stock, in addition to the first of many motor vehicles. One of the most unusual early models was a signboard, carried by two painters with buckets and brushes, advertising Hall's Distemper—the whitewash-like stuff that painters apply, not what the vet gives shots for!

Production of Dinky Toys vehicles began more or less simultaneously in Liverpool and in Bobigny, France. British and French Dinky Toys were more or less closely related throughout their history, occasionally sharing models, but more often (and particularly in the early days) producing different though generically related series of models. More and more Dinky Toys were produced by both branches through the late Thirties; then World War II brought production to a standstill for several years. By this time both branches had produced cars, trucks, buses, military vehicles, aircraft, ships and accessories of various kinds. Among the most popular models were the British branch's 38 series of sports cars and 39 series of American cars. All six of the 39 cars came out before the war, but only three of the 38 series did; one which did not, and in fact was never issued, was the legendary Triumph Dolomite; its place was taken by an Armstrong-Siddeley after the war.

It appears that remnants of prewar stocks were put on the market in time for the 1945 Christmas season, but no new production took place until 1946, when the last three 38 series sports cars joined the prewar trio. Numerous prewar models were now reissued, at first completely unchanged. One of the first notable changes occurred later in 1946: both branches had used plain cast wheel hubs and rubber tires until then; now British Dinky Toys began to appear with somewhat more realistic cast hubs with a raised central section, while a shortage of rubber compelled the French branch to produce one-piece all-metal wheels (including tires) for a time. The first entirely new postwar model, appropriately enough, a Jeep, appeared in 1946.

Since prewar dies and supplies had to be used for a while, there is no really clearcut dividing line between prewar and postwar production, but a number of changes (beginning with the wheel varieties already mentioned) took place during the Forties. In 1947 the first Dinky Supertoys were issued. These models of large vehicles had their own type of diecast wheel hubs, with a partly concave pattern, and treaded rubber tires. Until this point, all Dinky tires had been slick, but in the next few years a variety of treaded rubber tires came into being for cars and commercial vehicles alike.

Both branches expanded their production to include many interesting new models of various types, but they still used the original catalog numbering system of one, two or three digits followed in most cases by a letter. When a series (an excellent example is the 28 series of delivery vans) ran out of letters, it was continued on a three-digit (in this case 280) basis, and the first Dinky Supertoys were given three-digit 500-series numbers, a hint of what was to come in the Fifties: British Dinky Toys were changed to a three-digit numeral system in 1954, with some models not actually renumbered until a year or two later. French Dinky Toys changed to a similar all-numeral system during 1959. The 500 and 800 numbers were reserved for the French models, and the British system was prepared for this change a few years earlier, when the 500 series of Supertoys was renumbered with new 900 catalog numbers.

The British number change began at the start of 1954, and seems to have been finished by the start of 1956. Most numbers were changed as of January 1954; the 500 series moved to 900 numbers a year later, and some of them were shifted to 400 series numbers by the beginning of 1956. As is well known, the 1954 British Dinky catalog gave both numbers so everybody would know what was what.

French Dinky Toys, on the other hand, were renumbered during 1959. Thus any French model introduced early in 1959 had an old number briefly before the new system was introduced.

In the British system, one- and two-digit numbers were used for accessories, 100's for cars, 200 to 249 for racing and (later) sports cars, 250 to 299 for public service vehicles (buses, fire trucks, police cars, ambulances, road rollers, garbage trucks, etc.), 300's for agricultural vehicles (and much later for character cars), 400's for light and medium trucks, 600's for military vehicles, 700's for aircraft and accessories, and 900 numbers for Supertoys, including a few large aircraft. The French Dinky 500 numbers were used for cars and small trucks, with military vehicles, aircraft, Supertoys and accessories in the 800 series.

This era saw many changes in Dinky Toys. Bright two-tone color schemes for cars proliferated in 1956; a few, of course, had been used previously, including the last American issues of the 38 series. In that same year, Corgi Toys came on the market, equipped from the start with clear plastic windows, which appeared in Dinky Toys starting in 1958. Suspension was introduced in 1959, fingertip steering in 1960, and a wealth of moving and detailed parts in the Sixties. And in 1957 the first Dublo Dinky Toys appeared, intended (as the "Dublo" name implies) for use on OO gauge railroad platforms. Though a few small-scale models had been produced since the Thirties, most Dinky Toys had been built more or less to O gauge: $\frac{1}{43}$ to $\frac{1}{48}$ scale, with larger vehicles generally made to a slightly smaller scale so as not to look excessively big beside models of smaller vehicles. The Dublo series never really caught on and was withdrawn after a few years, leaving that field to Matchbox and other firms for the time being, while Dinky and Corgi competed for dominance in the O-gauge area.

In 1963 the British branch of Dinky Toys was bought by the Tri-Ang firm, and in the same year the first Dinky antique car, a Model T Ford, were issued. Dinky Toys' horizons were expanding in numerous ways, for in 1965 six models of American cars were made for Dinky in Hong Kong. Another Hong Kong range, the small-scale Mini-Dinky Toys, appeared in 1968, with each model sold in its own plastic garage. Most of the castings were completely of Hong Kong origin, though six pieces of heavy equipment originated with Mercury of Italy, were later produced by the unrelated US-Canadian firm of Mercury Industries, then by Gibbs of Ohio, and subsequently by Universal of Hong Kong. Two racing cars in the series were made by Best Box (sometimes written "Bestbox") of The Netherlands; this firm, now called Efsi, Holland or Oto, is actually a government agency that hires handicapped workers.

During the Sixties both Dinky and Corgi began to make their models to a larger scale, approximately 1/35, instead of 1/43. While they had their reasons for doing so, many of us collectors wish they had not, for the newer models just don't fit in with the old ones—and they take up more shelf space too! Nevertheless, it happened.

Late in 1967 the diecast toy market was strongly influenced by the first Mattel Hot Wheels, making it necessary for numerous other firms, including Dinky Toys, to develop similar wheels. Dinky Speedwheels first appeared in 1969, and this change was paralleled by others that brought more realism, more gimmicks, more play value, and more character cars based on children's television shows and films. Speedwheels, usually with chromed hub patterns, appeared on a variety of vehicles, replacing to some extent the many realistic cast hubs that had begun to appear a few years before, and models of real cars and trucks were joined in growing numbers not only by motor vehicles for Lady Penelope, Parsley, Candy, Andy and the Bearandas and their ilk, but by a number of outer-space characters and vehicles as well, most notably those of the popular Star Trek program. This trend, which had begun with Santa Claus and the Dinky Beats, kept growing, to the dismay of those who prefer scale models of real road vehicles.

But all these modes were not enough to keep Dinky Toys solvent. French production ceased as of 1972, though the Spanish firm of Pilen manufactured some French Dinky Toys later in the Seventies, and Solido made an effort to do the same in 1981. The British branch struggled on until 1980, farming out some production to Polistil in Italy as well as to the Universal firm of Hong Kong.

Since then the name of Dinky Toys has changed hands at least two more times, and now and then Hong Kong products have appeared with the Dinky Toys name on their bubblepacks. In 1987 the Kenner-Parker firm, whose branches include Tonka Toys, sold the Dinky Toys name to Universal International of Hong Kong, already the owner of another time-honored and originally British trade name: Matchbox. Soon afterward, Kenner-Parker took over Polistil and acquired some of the last old Dinky Toys dies. Other dies had previously been sold to a firm in India, which markets them as Nicky Toys, and for a time some models were produced in South America as well.

Late in 1987 Universal brought the Dinky Toys name back to some semblance of life by applying it to new color variations of six Matchbox cars. The firm subsequently announced that the name would be used for a new series of cars of the Fifties. These cars are produced today under the Matchbox name operated by Tyco. Some new models were introduced in 1996 but were too late in production to be priced into this guide.

Descriptions

I have tried to offer an adequately thorough description of every model and its major components, but space does not allow every single detail to be listed, nor have I tried to list every minor variation. Some collectors will want to go into the subject more deeply than this book does, while others will find this book too detailed for their interests, so I have tried to strike a happy medium by confining the listings to major variations: color and logo differences, noticeable casting changes, wheel types and the like.

One area I have not gone into very deeply is that of tires, simply because they are so easy to change. I have indicated whether a model was issued with black, white or gray tires, but have not generally tried to draw a dividing line between slick and treaded tires, or between rubber and plastic. As these changes are basically chronological in nature, it may well be that future research, which I hope this book will inspire, will bring out further information on the subject. On the other hand, there is no way of proving whether or not a single specimen with an atypical type of tire was issued in that form or whether the tires were changed by a previous owner. In fact, I changed the tires on some of my Dinky Toys in my early days, before I became aware of the historical value of their authenticity.

I hope this book will inspire further research in other areas as well, for I see this book not as the last word on the subject, but as a beginning. I do not claim to list every variation that exists, or even every major variation. If you have variations that are not listed here, please feel free to write. I am listing what I know or believe to exist, but I don't know everything there is to know about Dinky Toys and their variations, and I'll always be happy to receive additional information.

My main source of information has been my own collection, which includes nearly 1900 Dinky Toys collected over more than a quarter of a century. Other sources of data have been Cecil Gibson's "History of British Dinky Toys", Mike and Sue Richardson's "Dinky Toys & Modelled Miniatures", Jean-Michel Roulet's "Les Dinky Toys et Dinky Supertoys Français", Ed Symons' "Checklist of British Dinky Toys", and the "A2Z Dinky Specialised Book" compiled by Peter Harrington and Hugh Sutherland, as well as various other books and articles, plus numerous fellow collectors. Still in all, my data, as well as my time, money and energy, have their limitations. Perhaps in the future we can offer an edition with more nearly complete data; if so, it will be because people like you have contributed to it.

In describing the individual models, I have begun with the diecast metal parts: the BODY or main part of the vehicle's superstructure, or in some cases the CAB and REAR BODY of a truck as the two main pieces. Sometimes the cab is part of the CHASSIS-CAB to which the rear body is attached; in other cases a model may have a separate detailed CHASSIS that is more than a mere baseplate by virtue of including parts of the vehicle as well as lettering. Opening diecast parts can include DOORS, the HOOD, the TRUNK lid, a RAMP or TAILGATE, a removable TOP or COVER, as well as a swiveling FRONT AXLE MOUNT, a TOWBAR, the BLADE of a snowplow or bulldozer, a SHOVEL, BACK HOE or similar heavy equipment parts, and the ARMS, BOOMS, etc. that hold and operate them. Non-moving metal parts may include a BUMPER, GRILLE, EXHAUST PIPE, MUFFLER, and many others, including a diecast DRIVER or STEERING WHEEL.

Most significant casting changes that apply to a series of models are easy to include in the listings, as the models to which they apply were numbered more or less consecutively. One change that applies to models in both the 200 and 400 series cannot be handled so easily: that of the three Ford Transit van castings. So let us state the most important differences here:

Type 1 (1966-1974): first type grille, sliding right front door, and a smaller casting (122 mm) than the other two.

Type 2 (1975-1978): a bigger casting (129 mm) of the same vehicle, with the same grille but without the sliding right front door.

Type 3 (1978-1980): the same size (129 mm) as Type 2, with a new grille and hood design, otherwise unchanged.

Finally we come to the wheels. If, as on some old Dinky Toys, the entire wheel, including the tire, is a single diecast piece, then it will be listed as a WHEEL; otherwise the term HUB will be used for a metal (or plastic) central section on which a rubber or plastic TIRE is mounted. Entire wheels can, of course, also be made of rubber, or more recently of plastic.

TIRES will be listed after wheels, generally with a notation of their color though not always of their material. Some wheel details will be listed; others can be inferred. Cast hubs were originally quite featureless; the type introduced in 1946 have a raised central area, and Supertoy hubs have a partially concave pattern. PATTERNED cast hubs were used on numerous models in more recent years. Also made of metal, though not cast, are TURNED hubs (often called "spun" hubs), which were turned on a lathe rather than being cast in a mold, and almost always left unpainted (if painted, their color will be noted; otherwise they may be assumed to be the color of the unpainted metal.) Although British turned hubs can be understood not to have been cast, I have my doubts about some French types. For the sake of consistency I have referred to all the French Dinky metal hubs which M. Roulet describes as "concave" as "turned" to stress their concave profile. SPEEDWHEELS (Dinky Toys' registered name for their type of fast wheels) are made completely of plastic, often with chromed hub patterns. Along with wheels, the presence of SUSPENSION and STEERING will be noted.

Various sheet metal (also known as tinplate) parts have been used, notably the BASE of many an older model. The base sometimes holds a model together or holds the wheels and axles in place, and it often bears lettered information that identifies a model, sometimes including the catalog number. There are two basic baseplate types: the older type usually has lines around at least part of its edge, small lettering, and no catalog number. The newer type, introduced not too long before the 1954 numbering change, has no lines, large lettering, and often, though not always, a catalog number. If the same casting and base were used for several models (such as vans with different logo types), then they were deliberately made without numbers. Speaking of numbers, those which included letters have been printed with lower-case letters, while the letters actually used on baseplates have been capitalized, and the same system will be found in this book: upper-case letters in reference to what is seen on baseplates, otherwise lower-case letters. Other sheet metal parts can include a TOW HOOK, WINDSHIELD FRAME (as opposed to a transparent plastic or celluloid windshield itself), some types of STEERING WHEEL, and various control pieces such as the tipping levers or blade-raising linkages that really work, or the control levers of bulldozers that just represent the real thing. The REAR COVER of many an older truck is also made of sheet metal and can be removed, while the TANK rear body of a tank truck is sometimes made of sheet metal but is not removable.

Many parts, including the body itself, can be made of plastic; these may be exterior parts such as a GRILLE, BUMPER, TOP, ANTENNA, TANK, LOAD, etc., interior items such as the INTERIOR itself (seats, inside floor, dashboard, etc.), DRIVER, STEERING WHEEL (not always listed, to save space), or ENGINE block, the transparent WINDOWS or WINDSHIELD (clear unless noted as tinted), and accessories such as figures (human or otherwise), luggage, signs, or the bullets or rockets of war vehicles.

Once the major parts of a model have been listed, we can turn to their finish and, if any, their logo. I have tried to give a good general idea of the colors of models and their parts without being excessively precise. I realize from reading other people's descriptions of models that we do not all draw the line between, for example, yellow and orange, or white and cream or ivory, in exactly the same place, and that some writers call unpainted metal parts silver. In this book UNPAINTED means bare metal, SILVER means painted silver, and CHROMED means plated in a silvery finish. I have tried to reserve the word WHITE for only a truly white finish, and to describe shades that are not quite white as off-white, ivory or cream. Of course, parts that were white when they were new may have aged in the interim to qualify for one of the not-quite-white terms. The major colors will be preceded by the adjective "light" or "dark" to indicate a shade notably lighter or darker than the medium shades indicated by an unmodified color name. At times when two shades of the same color appear on a model, adjectives such as "medium", "darker" or "lighter" will be used for clarification, with the latter two terms simply meaning a darker or lighter shade than the one previously mentioned. Other terms such as tan, charcoal gray, turquoise, aqua, navy blue and maroon will be used when my eyes advise me to, and I can assure you that MAROON models will be described as maroon and not merely as RED. (Warning: in some languages, maroon or a similar-looking term means a brown, tan or red-brown shade, but we use it here to mean a very dark red.)

The LOGO of a model includes the lettering, numbering, emblems or designs that appear on it. They can be painted (by hand or tampo-printed), applied as a DECAL (wet transfer) or an adhesive paper or plastic LABEL (dry transfer). Their major contents and colors will be noted. I have tried to note whether the logo is painted or applied with decals or labels, but I know I have not always succeeded.

The length of each model will be given in millimeters because the metric system is understood worldwide, exact, and a lot easier to print than fractions of an inch. If my measurements differ from yours by a millimeter or two, please don't be horrified; perhaps my ruler and my eyes are just less accurate than yours. As time did not allow me to measure every model in my collection, I have generally used dimensions listed in other published sources. In the case of Dinky airplanes, though, I wanted to include both length and wingspan (in that order) and so have measured all my airplanes myself.

The exact dating of Dinky Toys is not without its problems. The fact that some accessories were produced in the early Thirties is not a problem, but the events of the World War II era are sometimes debatable. I have found it convenient to end the prewar age as of 1940 and begin the postwar era as of 1946, though some production may have taken place in the interim. In general terms, the first year cited for a model is the year it was actually introduced or, lacking such precise information, the first year it was catalogued. The second year is the last year it was actually produced or catalogued—not the last year it was seen on the shelves of a toyshop! If only one year is stated, the item was produced for only that one year.

While some books have noted such details as the kinds of boxes the models have been sold in, or the presence or absence of the manufacturer's name on the model, this book does not. As noted above, data have had to be limited to some extent to keep the book from becoming too big and too expensive. The specialist can look for this information in other books on the subject, notably those books already cited.

This book includes information on all Dinky Toys, regardless of the nature of the item or its country of origin. I feel that the collector is likely to want information on French, Hong Kong and other non-British Dinky Toys, and may want to know about accessories as well as motor vehicles, not to mention aircraft (real and science-fiction types), ships and trains as well as cars and trucks. Thus I have tried to make the listings as complete as possible. What you as an individual hobbyist want to collect is for you to decide.

The photographs will be arranged in roughly chronological order, generally with models grouped in each picture in some more or less logical way. The models shown in the pictures are from my own collection. The listings are in numerical order, by catalog number. Perhaps some collectors would rather see all the cars listed together, all the emergency vehicles together, etc., but I feel that in a reference book of this type a numerical listing is the most practical system, with the photographs providing some sense of chronology. The Richardson and Roulet books in particular offer many photographs of British and French Dinky Toys respectively, many in color, and show some of the oldest and rarest Dinky Toys which I lack; you are urged to consult those books for additional visual data. Photographs in Dr. Gibson's book and drawings and descriptions in the A2Z book, as well as information in the Richardson and Roulet books, will come in handy for identifying such things as casting variations. And my book, "Miniature Emergency Vehicles", includes pictures and listings of all Dinky Toys fire vehicles, ambulances and such—not to mention those of countless other manufacturers from all over the world.

The listings are divided into two sections, comprising the old and new numbering systems. True, some of the old 500 and 700 numbers seem to fit into the newer system, but I think it is less confusing to keep the two systems separate than to try to integrate them and end up with the old Dinky military models invading the 100 series of newer cars. British and French Dinky Toys will not be relegated to different sections of the book, though; there is no need to do so under the newer numbering system, and since there are fairly few cases of number duplication under the old system, other than the use of the same numbers for different British and French issues, it seems adequate to suffix the catalog numbers with a hyphen and the letter F (for France) and G (for Great Britain). Under the new system, the catalog numbers will also be suffixed with S for models made in Spain and with R for subsequent uses of the numbers. The suffix -H will also be used for models made in Hong Kong. Individual variations will be numbered consecutively with numerals. So the actual catalog number of any model will appear before the hyphen, with the letter and number after it indicating the basic model and the variation. In some cases, listings will include unnumbered sub-headings to indicate casting or other substantial changes; these will not be numbered themselves, and the variations will be numbered consecutively for the entire model.

A price guide has been included to give you at least a vague idea of what models are worth. I am, frankly, not a believer in price guides, but my publishers and I know that books with price guides sell better than those without. I would urge you, though, not to expect the whole world to follow this price guide, but to obtain sales lists from a variety of dealers and see what models are actually selling for at toy shows.

As I have already said, the purpose of this book is to offer the collector as much concise, essential information as possible. The job is far from finished, as the many question marks in the listings make clear; sometimes I simply cannot verify a variation, sometimes only one or two details of it are known, while at other times only one or two details are lacking.

So I appeal to you; please feel free to send additional information you possess, such as variations not listed here and missing details of listed variations. During the next few years I'll gather all the data I can get and, I hope, produce an updated and much more nearly complete version of the book. I'll be very happy to receive any relevant data, though I must ask you not to quibble about measurements that differ by a millimeter from yours and not to add insignificant minor details for which we simply don't have room. For example, casting changes often include insignificant minor details as well as the big change that suffices to tell us what we want to know. More could be said of every model in the book—but then the book would be twice as big and cost twice as much. So let's limit ourselves to the more essential details that we need for identification of models and variations. My address, as stated at the end of this introduction, is not likely to change in the foreseeable future, so please feel free to write.

And from here on, the subject is yours to do with as you like. I hope this book will be of use and interest to you, and that you will enjoy our hobby as much as I have. Whatever you choose to collect, happy hobbying to you all!

Variations

The Old System of Catalog Numbers

This system developed in the Thirties and remained in use until 1954 in Britain and 1959 in France. Some of the same numbers were used for different models in Britain and France; the suffix -F (for France) or -G (for Great Britain) will indicate the primary country of production of each model. Any later uses of the same number will be suffixed with R.

1-F RAILROAD STATION STAFF 1934-1940, 1946-1948

Boxed set of six diecast (prewar) or five plastic (postwar) figures: 1a Chef de gare, 1b Portier, 1c Chef de train, 1d Sergent de ville, 1e Contrôleur

- 1 Six diecast figures, two porters (1934-1940).
- 2 Five plastic figures, one porter (1946-1948)

1-G RAILROAD STATION STAFF 1931-1940, 1946-1953 #001

Boxed set of six (prewar) or five (postwar) diecast figures: 1a Station Master, 1b Guard, 1c Ticket Collector, 1d Engine Driver, 1e Porter with bags, 1f Porter (prewar only).

- 1 Six figures, more detailed painting (1931-1940).
- 2 Five figures, less detailed painting (1946-1953).

The New System of Catalog Numbers

The newer Dinky Toys catalog numbering system was introduced in 1954 in Britain, though it had its origins earlier. The older system included three-digit series such as the 280 vans and 500 heavy trucks; some of these numbers were in use when the new system was introduced; some fit into the new system, while others were changed to fit in. A year later additional changes were made in the British system, with all the 500 series vehicles changed to 900 numbers. Apparently it was already known that the 500 numbers would be used by the French branch of Dinky Toys, though this did not come to pass until 1959, when all French Dinky Toys were changed to 500 and 800 numbers, completing the change to the new system. Whereas the British change took place at the beginning of 1954, the French change was made during 1959, so that models introduced early in the year still had old-style catalog numbers for a short time.

We must note, though, that the Mini-Dinky Toys made in Hong Kong in the Sixties had two-digit numbers, and the last French-Spanish Dinky Toys had four-digit 1400 and 1500 numbers. More recently, another Hong Kong series has used three-digit numbers, and the newest Dinky Toys (pending the appearance of newer ones from Matchbox) have no numbers except those they had when they were part of the Matchbox Series! All of the recent Hong Kong and Macau products will be listed at the end of this section, but as we begin with number 001, we still find ourselves at least partly in Hong Kong. All the Hong Kong models will be suffixed with the letter H, all those made in Spain with the letter S.

Hong Kong Dinky Toys

In 1968, not long after the production of six 1/42 scale Dinky Toys car models in Hong Kong, a new series of small-scale models came onto the market, most of them also made in Hong Kong. Some were made in goodly quantities and marketed both in Britain and America, often in two different colors; others were made in small quantities, and most collectors (including this writer) have never seen them. Unfortunately, some of these models have been particularly prone to metal fatigue. Two racing car models were made by Best Box (now Efsi) of The Netherlands, while six pieces of heavy equipment were originally made by Mercury of Italy, then by Mercury of Canada, and Gibbs of the United States, before being produced for Dinky by Universal of Hong Kong. The Universal products, which were marketed by the Kresge (K-Mart) chain in the U.S.A., will be shown in the photo section along with the Hong Kong Dinky Toys, as will the two Best Box racing cars.

Late in 1987, shortly after acquiring the Dinky Toys name, Universal used that name on the bubblepacks of six Matchbox cars made in Macau. The models were painted in nonstandard Matchbox colors, but still bore the Matchbox name on their bases. Since they were never given Dinky numbers, we can only list them by their Matchbox numbers.

Models Inspired by Dinky Toys

Models closely resembling Dinky Toys have appeared at various times. In prewar days, the British firm of Johillco produced at least one such model, much resembling the Dinky 23a MG racer. In more modern times, Japan's Marusan firm made a small series of models based on Dinky Toys:

8501 PANHARD SEMI-TRAILER

Cast cab and open semi, based on the French Dinky 32a but without a sheet metal rear cover, known to exist in light green and in orange

8502 ROYAL MAIL VAN

Cast body, clearly based on Dinky 260 and, like it, painted red.

8503 DAIMLER AMBULANCE

160 mm

79 mm

96 mm

Cast body, clearly based on 253 and painted white with red crosses

8504 FORD MILK TRUCK

Cast chassis-cab and rear body, based on the French Ford 250 Nestle truck, with blue chassis-cab and cream rear body with "Nestle" cast in.

8505 OBSERVATION COACH

Cast body, based on Dinky 280 and painted light blue with dark blue trim

88 mm

113 mm

8506 EUCLID DUMP TRUCK

Cast chassis-cab and tipper, looking like Dinky 965 from the back but, as far as I can tell from a photo, not from the front. Color unknown

8507 AUSTIN SERVICE CAR

Cast body, based on the Dinky 470 van, in blue with "Service Car" decals.

Another firm inspired by Dinky was Lemeco of Sweden, whose 1950 series of diecast models included:

ML44 FRAZER NASH-BMW
ML47 WILLIS JEEP
ML58 FORD SEDAN
ML71 AUSTIN DEVON

Of these, I have only the Austin, resembling Dinky 152, it measures 86 mm and is painted dark cream with red hubs.

In more modern times, the Metosul firm of Portugal produced an Atlantean doubledeck bus, presumably using dies purchased from Dinky. It exists in numerous color and logo variations, two of which will be shown in a photo in this book.

Many Dinky Toys have been "chopped" into models never made by Dinky, and one example will be shown, an American-made

Models Inspired by Dinky Toys

Jurgens model of an ambulance made from a Dinky 131 Cadillac convertible body. Many white metal kit models also bear a resemblance to the Dinky Toys of old. One series, known as "Dinky Style", offers a range of interesting models in the style of prewar and early postwar Dinky Toys, but of vehicles not actually made by Dinky.

Around 1970, the firm of S. Kumar & Co., of Calcutta, India, bought a number of dies from Dinky Toys and produced them in India under the name of Nicky Toys. In some cases the lettering on the models and boxes was changed to give the new name, in others it was not. Since the models are made from actual Dinky Toys dies and, in almost all cases, bear their original Dinky numbers, we shall simply list them here, along with the colors I know them to exist in. There are surely other color variations for at least some of the Nicky Toys. But even if they were painted the same colors as the original Dinky Toys, which they are generally not, their quality in general and wheels in particular would mark them as non-original products.

PRICE GUIDE

This revised price guide was done by members of the DINKY TOY CLUB of AMERICA, specifically the founder, Jerry Fralick (MEM #1). This guide is an attempt to make listed prices more realistic to the collectible market in today's economy. The pictures are the same of those that were used in the earlier price guides. This revised price guide is more usable in that page numbers have been added to the index. A page number(s) refers to the picture location of the referenced toy.

As in past price guides, a price range is given. The range represents the difference in toys that are collectible, but may be without boxes, or a "common" piece at the low end of the price scale to a higher price that one might find for a toy MINT and with a box. Keep in mind, it is possible for a collector to pay more for one toy than another of the same description. Some color or logo types are worth more. Scarce color or two tone combinations can sometimes command higher prices. Play worn or toys that may be in need of restoration would be less than the low price range figure. This guide does not present a value for toys that have been restored. Models that have both old and new system numbers have been priced the same.

Finally, multiple sources were used in updating the values. Market values were compared from various auction results, both here in the United States as well as in England. Additionally, the values were compared to prices shown at national toy shows, and dealer's and collector's sales lists. If you have any comments regarding this new price guide, you can write to me c/o Schiffer Publishing or to the DINKY TOY CLUB of AMERICA @ P.O. Box 11, Highland, Maryland, 20777, or check out the DTCA webpage at www.dinkytoy.org.
