Model meltdown

OK, so we headed to Phoenix, Arizona, in August for the IPMS/USA

National Convention. Yes, that's right, to Phoenix, THAT Phoenix, in summer.

We knew it would be hot — really hot — and it was. How's 107-109 degrees Fahrenheit every day sound? There was even a dust storm one evening.

But we're tough, so that didn't bother us or the other modelers attending the International Plastic Modelers Society nationals because the show was a couple floors down in the convention center. Nice and cool there.

But heat, that stifling heat of an Arizona summer, was a major topic of conversation. It started at the club meetings and on the forums months before, folks talking about those who had left models in their cars or trucks when attending the last IPMS event in Phoenix, in 2010. There was talk of sagging and melted models.

So a meltdown had been on all of our minds before we even set the compass for Phoenix. Melting was on Peter Litwincuk's mind, too. Peter is from Jenison, Michigan, near Grand Rapids on the Lake Michigan side of the state.

Unlike the rest of us though, Peter expressed his Fahrenheit frets by building and entering a model in the show's Humor category. It's title? The Hot Road to Phoenix.

You're seeing it here, a gorgeous red 1953 Ford pickup from the 1/25 scale AMT/Ertl kit. Peter says that was built in all seriousness several years ago for a club group build. He went the hot-rod route adding tall stacks and scratchbuilding the bed from wood before sanding I-beam brass to create metal cleats for the floor. You can't see that here though because of what's in that bed.

In back are a host of melted models in miniature, plus kit boxes, all looking sadly saggy from the heat they've been exposed to enroute to broiling Phoenix. At the steering wheel is a skeleton holding a "Phoenix or bust!" sign.

Peter mostly builds aircraft, but says he varies his work. The melted aircraft here are from a 1/700 scale aircraft carrier. Then there are missiles and bombs from various kits, all torched using matches. The boxes are shrunk from box art he found on the web. And then there's the skeleton, store-bought, but he had to saw an arm off and readjust it to hold the sign.

Since he already had the truck, he says from concept to completion the diorama took just a week to complete.

And yes, he drove the hot road to Phoenix (about 1,900 miles, one way) with no sizzling styrene to show for it. Peter entered six models in the show, his ninth nationals, and while he scored no trophies he stirred a lot of laughs with this creation. All told there were 424 entrants and 3,524 models on the tables in Phoenix — a hot show indeed! FSM

MODELING THE GREAT WAR

Great War Scale Modeling, a new special issue from FineScale Modeler, shows you how to build iconic tanks, ships, and biplanes from a long-neglected part of modeling history — WWI.

Stories include:

- Recreating the famous Red Baron's Fokker Triplane.
- How to rig the wings of a WWI biplane.
- Building a realistic German battleship, the SMS Konig.
- Creating a killer Renault FT for U.S. service.
- 30+ pages of photo galleries and much more!

Whether you're a beginner or advanced modeler, you'll find a wealth of ideas and tips from notable experts in the field.
