Dear Fellow Railfan,

On the cover of this catalog, and also right here on page 2, is a print depicting an enormous Chicago Great Western train rolling through southern Minnesota. One of the last Class I railroads to be built, CGW linked Chicago, Minneapolis, Omaha, and Kansas City, and competed against better-known companies in the same territory, able to stay afloat through innovation, efficiency, and customer service. They were often called "the Corn Belt Route" because of its operating in the Midwest. One of their defining characteristics was, just like the print depicts, pulling an inordinate number of freight cars at once, seemingly spanning miles.

If you're looking for more rail art, we're offering a great variety of prints in the catalog, including more from Christian Oldham on page 9.

We have something for everyone here at Historic Rail & Roads, and if you're looking for collectibles and décor, we have plenty of nostalgic shirts, kits, and signs starting on page 49.

So, flip through and choose your favorites! Then call us toll free at 800-261-5922, mail in the order form provided, or place your order online at HistoricRail.com.
